

Deal Gail and Team

For the second year in a row we (Aconex/Oracle) have had the privilege of working with Monash on their mentoring program.

It has been great fun and a valuable lesson in the potential of people given the right coaching and support. The program sets up a daunting challenge to build something out of nothing, with people you barely if at all know, and 13 weeks later great products emerge to the amazement of everyone involved.

It has been fantastic watching the students form into teams, learn how to share and take feedback, to collaborate like real world product developers, and to overcome the challenges of limited time and money to ship something useful.

Not every team produces a great product outcome, but it is clear that every student learns a valuable lesson in this program and it definitely sets them up for the challenges they will face when entering the workforce.
